An Invention that Will Do Away with Pipes

Promition that Will Do Away with Pipes and Cigars—Will it Work?

Promition Frequent with Territorial Enterprise.

Professor Maulesel, a German gentleman who has recently arrived in this city, has secured a suitable lot on South G street, and is about to creet extensive works which will prove of almost incalculable advantage to all lovers of the "weed," and which will obviate the necessity for both pipes and cigars. The works he is about to creet will bear in all respects a stiking resemblance to, the works of the Virginia City. for both pipes and cigars. The works he is about to erect will bear in all respects a striking resemblance to the works of the Virginia City Gas Company. There will be large retorts, in which tobacco will be burned and the smoke thus produced will pass through proper pipes to a large bell-shaped receptacle of boiler iron, somewhat resembling a gasometer, where it will be cooled and purified and so scented that it shall have the flavor of the fluest Havana cigar. To this product of his retorts and purifying apparatus the Professor has given the name of "Tabaksine," but for convenience we will call it by a less scientific name, that of smoke, which, after all, it is.

From the smokeometer a main pipe will lead up into the city, and from this will be small branch pipes leading to all the principal houses and saloons in the town. In every house where the amoke is taken there will be placed a meter, similar to a gas meter, but much more delicately and saloons in the town. In every nouse where the amoke is taken there will be placed a meter, similar to a gas meter, but much more delicately constructed. Running from these meters will be pipes leading to all the rooms in the house, and connected with these pipes, at convenient points, will be long flexible tubes, each tipped with a handsome amber mouth piece for the comfort and convenience of smokers.

When a man desires to take a smoke he has not to go to the trouble of hunting up tobacco and filling his pipe, then of finding and lighting a match, and perhaps burning his fingers, and afterward getting fire and ashes upon his clothes half a dozen times before his smoke is ended. There is none of this trouble and vexation. He has only to place the amber mouth piece between his lips, turn a small silver thumbscrew, and the cool, delicious, perfumed smoke giddes into his mouth. By this ingenious and delightful arrangement all danger of fires from pipes and cigars will be obviated, and millions in valuable property annually saved.

The rates of insurance of those who have neither pipes nor cigars in use upon their premments, and is most delicately and delightfully perfumed, it is expected that it will at once become exceedingly popular among the ladies. Instead of their use of it being offensive it will prove quite the contrary, as by means of it they will shed abroad wherever they may go a most ravishing aroma. They will have for their use elegantly-carved amber mouth pieces, hooped about with gold and set with diamonds and other gens. When out walking their reservoir of smoke will be contained in the pannier, to which it will impart a much more symmetrical shape than can be attained by the use of newspapers; besides, by giving the rubber of the smoke tank a suitable thickness and strength, it will be found to be very convenient when the wearer desires to sit, as it will serve as a cushion, a semething which is often a great convenience and comfort. Due notice in regard to terms per month, quarter, and year will be given in a few days. Men are now engaged in grading the lot on which the works will be erected, and the necessary machinery is on the way from New York

The queer freaks of a sleeping man in Louis are thus related by the Times: "A anductor of street cars named Leslie, boards at house nearly opposite the offices of the car opstory. Adjoining the building is one of a swer altitude, the roof of which is about six set below Leslie's wundow. East of this are the ar stables. Between 11 and 12 o'clock one ight Leslie was seen, in his night dress, cutting p all kinds of queer pranks on the roof of his oarding house. He was here throwing a serious of flin-flaps, dancing backward and forward, and esticulating in the strangest possible manner. Here he indulged in a little tight-rope practice, walking along the wire of the fire alarm telegraph divesting himself of his shirt while in this queer position and throwing it down on the roof, the crowd meanwhile being in breathless suspense at the danger in which the poor fellow was. He then jumped back on to the roof, resumed his shirt, threw a first-rate sommersault, and climbed up to the roof radge of the house. These sort of evolutions were continued without any apparent fatigue or thought of danger for some time. He then jumped down on to the stable roof, some four or five feet lower, and marched up and down the front wall of the building, some hundred feet in length, going through the manual exercises the walle in the most perfect manner. He returned by the course he had come, climbing the bare wall at the east end of the middle building without any apparent difficulty, and making a clean leap of several feet through his window into his bedroom. A number of the officers of the car company went into his room immediately, where they found Leslie lying on his bed, evidently fast askeep, though with staring, wide open eyes. After some difficulty he was awakened from his stopor, but was unable to give any reason for his strange antics, being evidently unconscious that anything unusual had occurred. His attention was called to his blackened hands and bleeding feet, but he could not give an idea as to how they came in that condition. Altogether it is one of the most extraordinary cases of sommanbulism or record, and well worthy the attention of the scientific.

A Western Editor's Dive.

There was a regardant Geneva Lake, Wis., on Monday last, and among the Chicago spectators was Mr. Charles Wison, the esteemed editor and proprietor of the Econing Journal. Mr. Wilson has long taken a practical interest in the charming resort in question, and, as may be inferred, was prepared to specially enjoy the festivities of the regards. He was standing upon the bridge waiting for the boats to start, when he was somewhat rudely though it appears unintentionally, justled by a strapping gentleman just at his elbow.

The latter individual, although totally upon intentionally, jestiled by a straighting gentleman just at his elbow.

The latter individual, although totally unknown to Mr. Wilson, was really almost as much of a character as the editor himself, being no less distinguished a personage than "Red-Handed Mike," a noted bruiser in training near Geneva Lake for a forthcoming prize fight.

Annoyed at having been so carelessly pushed, Mr. Wilson turned a gaze of scorn upon the unknown so marked and severe as to stir at once the latter's disguist.

"Maybe you own this bridge," quoth Michael of the nominally gory palms.

"Well," sneered Mr. Wilson, "I probably paid about as much for the building of this bridge as you or any other man upon it.

"Perhaps you own the whole lake, too?" continued he of the sanguinary paws.

"I certainly have done more for its improvement than a dozen like you," retorted the some-what justly incensed editor.

There was a shade of sadness in the voice of Red-Handed Mike," as he replied:

"Then you better light over into it and see how it is getting along," at the same time laying his brawny fists upon the astonished journalist and heaving him plump into the water.

Friends promptly jerked the floundering involuntary bather back to shore, where, having obtained a dry suit and learning that he had been "chinning" to a professional bruiser, he rensibly saw the magnitude of the joke, and flow enjoys a mention of it as hugely as any one.
